COOPER ANNOUNCES SOUTHERN PLANS TO PUT ON TWO TRAINS

Ticket Agent Here Has Not Been Advised of Change In Schedule

TO MEET "PAN" HERE, IS PLAN

Better Service Aim of Road. Attorney States

The Southern railway plans, on June 1, to restore trains number 23 and 24, between Memphis and New York, according to announcement made in Huntsville by Lawrence Cooper, Southern railway attorney, who has returned to his home there after a trip to Washington and New York, where he was in conference with officials of the road.

Mr. Cooper also announced that the schedule of train number 43 would be moved up, in order to make connection with the Pan-American, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad here. The Huntsville Daily Times quotes Mr. Cooper as saying that the schedule would be effective Sunday evening. The new schedule, however, has not yet gone into effect, and Ticket Agent Roberts, in charge of the union station office, announced today that he had not yet been advised of any changes in the schedule.

The Times says: "Vice President Oliver of the Southern Railway and about a dozen other officials of the road will be in Huntsville about May 20 for a conference with our local business men looking to further improvements in the service and depot facilities here. Mr. Cooper stated that the executive officers of the Southern are ready and willing to do everything they can for their patrons and the public in this territory.

"As to a restoration of the Newsboy train to leave here west bound each morning at about 6 o'clock, the officials are not very favorable but the friends of the movement are still working on the proposition and it is hoped satisfactory results may be secured as to this."

MARKED ADVANCE SHOWN FOR FARM ACTIVITIES THIS SPRING

The statistical report for Alabama as of May 1 this year, issued by F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician, co-operating with the Extension Service and State Department of Agriculture, is notable for two features. One is the marked advance shown for farm activities this spring, and the other is the very noticeable decline in farm animal mortality for the past year.

The following statement shows the losses by death of farm animals in Alabama during the past twelve months as measured by deaths per 1,000:

	1924-5	1923-4
Horses and mules.....	11	20
Cattle	26	81
Sheep	27	81
Hogs	30	44

Expressed in numbers and value, the losses for the past year are as follows:

	Number	Value
Horses and mules.....	4,800	$422,400
Cattle	24,400	414,800
Sheep	2,000	8,000
Hogs	25,000	258,000

Total$1,103,200

Losses during the year 1923-4 were valued at $2,651,200 or more than twice those of the year just closed. The cause of the decline in death rate is mainly the open winter just closed, during which very few losses from exposure occurred. Doubtless some better care of animals is responsible for part of the difference.

The percent of plowing done to May 1 this year is reported at 90, against only 76 last year, while the proportion of planting done to May

W. R. SMITH BUYS CASA GRANDE SITE

Three Story Structure Is Second Sale To Local Realtor

The sale of the Casa Grande building on central Second avenue was announced today as being made to W. R. Smith through Allison and Woods. The former owners of the building were Mrs. E. H. Allison, Mrs. W. M. Murray and H. B. Beard. The sale marked the second within the past ten days to Mr. Smith.

The Casa Grande structure three story modern type, was erected in 1904 when the boom of the early days was being felt in Decatur and Albany, then New Decatur. The erection of the single building was not in accordance with the original plan. At that time it was the purpose to erect a hotel covering the entire block and to be known as the Casa Grande block.

The building at the present time is occupied by the F. W. Woolworth company on the ground floor. The story is occupied by several offices and two apartments in the rear. The third story is made into living quarters. The building is of fifty foot frontage on Second avenue and although erected in 1904 is one of the most attractive on the avenue. The structure is of stone.

Sale of the site to Mr. Smith is the second transaction within the past ten days to the local realtor. Mr. Smith purchased the Bernstein building on Moulton street and First avenue less than ten days ago. The sale figure was not made known in either transaction.

POLICE UNABLE TO MAKE YOUTH TALK

Son of Dr. Dillon Will Not Reveal His Whereabouts

(Associated Press)

The body was found on Washington University athletic field, St. Louis county.

Continued attempts to draw information from Edward C. Dillon, 19, to learn his whereabouts the night his father was slain were unavailing last night. Three lawyers for the youth conferred today indicating that they would institute habeas corpus proceedings, if bail was not permitted.

The boy, beneficiary of $25,000 insurance carried by his father, steadily refused to answer questions, hinting that a love affair prompted his reluctance.

"If it comes to a question of hanging for the death of my father, then I'll talk," he told detectives.

Whitfield Deprecates Filing of Action by Revenue Chief

(Associated Press)

JACKSON, Miss., May 11—W. J. Miller, state revenue agent, who filed a $12,000,000 suit against the Ford Motor company last week, announced today he would not file any more such suits until the legislature had had an opportunity to change or repeal the state anti-trust law.

The statement from the revenue agent followed one issued last night by Governor Henry L. Whitfield, deprecating the filing of the suit, and declared it was "fraught with most unfortunate consequences" and that it did not reflect "the attitude of the people of Mississippi toward legitimate business."

Mr. Miller declared he had to uphold his oath of office and declared:

"I will, however, promise the governor and the people of Mississippi I will refrain from bringing similar suits until the legislature has been given an opportunity to correct or change the anti-trust law. The Ford suit has been brought as an instance of violation of the existing statute, however, and my office will carry the suit to a conclusion."

"I believe I am acting in accord with my duty and I therefore shall take orders from no one save the courts of the state."

Mr. Miller added that if Governor Whitfield desires the anti-trust law abolished that he will support him and so recommend to the legislature.

AMUSEMENTS

Alice Terry long recognized as one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, enjoyed her first opportunity of wearing lavish modern gowns in her first Paramount picture, "Sackcloth and Scarlet," which will be shown at the Princess theater today and Tuesday.

Miss Terry has been beautifully gowned in many pictures but in such instances the gowns were of period design. In such pictures as have shown her in modern clothes her roles did not permit anything extravagant.

Wearing eight different gowns in one day was the record set by Miss Terry during the filming of "Sackcloth and Scarlet." All in all, she wears twelve different creations in the production, each designed by the man responsible for Gloria Swanson's screen fashions. The fact that Miss Terry during the filming of "Sackcloth and Scarlet," was "shot."

The picture was adapted from George Gibb's novel by Tom Geraghty, Jules Furthman and Julie Herne and produced by Henry King, who made "The White Sister," "Tol'able David," "Romola," and other big screen hits. Dorothy Sebastian, Orville Caldwell are also featured in the cast.

Three Types of Dinner Dresses Warm Enough for Cool Evenings

THE NEWEST ENSEMBLES ARE ENTIRELY MADE OF GEORGETTE OF VELVET OF MARABOUT. EVENING GOWN OF BEADED STRIPS MOULDED TO THE FIGURE.

THE very nicest thing about the ensemble suit is that we can bring it with us into the summer. That is, if it is made up of georgette. For then it is sheer, light of weight, and cool.

A georgette ensemble suit is seen at the left above in the sketch. It is in dove grey, with sleeveless jacket bordered at the bottom in trimming of self material, cut into hundreds of peacock, oval-shaped pieces, and sewn together so that they give the appearance of a ruff. There is no other trimming to the suit . . . but there is a boutonniere of a fuchsia-colored rose, with purplish foliage. The hat is grey.

Other georgette ensembles have been seen with a navy blue georgette coat lined in beige georgette, with a matching beige dress beneath.

So much for the summer suit. As for evening dresses, two are seen above, in the photo, and in the right hand sketch.

Crowded Hour." Miss Daniels finds this gown not too warm for dinner dances that occur at fresco at smart clubs and restaurants during the summer. Indeed, a velvet gown for dining out-of-doors in Paris, in the Bois, on a cool night, is almost a necessity.

The sketched evening gown is likewise Miss Daniels' and is formed of strips of silver lame, moulded to the figure, beaded all over in orchid, pink, and pale green beads. The strips are not sewn together near the bottom of the dress, so that they flare out in a fascinating fringe at every step.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Store Up Strength For Use In Emergency

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

CAN a man store up energy so that in a trying physical or mental emergency he can do without food and sleep for unusual periods of time and suffer no permanent damage to his health?

The answer may seem simple, but really it isn't. You cannot store up so much sleep as not to need any for a long time. You can sleep a lot to make up for what you have lost, but you can't store up a surplus of sleep to carry you over three or four days without it.

It would be absurd to assert that you can drink a bucket of water and utilize it as required. A camel can do that, but a man can't.

Perhaps a more extreme example may be made of the air you breathe. Needless to say, you cannot take it up into your lungs and call it as your needs require through the next day or two.

When it comes to food, there is not the same need of frequent indulgence. But there is a psychology about eating. We are so used to eating frequently that we get "faint" if we run over meal time. But that symptom is founded more on appetite than it is on the necessity of nourishment.

The fact is, however, that by right living and reasonable care of the body it is possible to build up a physical and mental reserve which will carry its possessor through every emergency he is likely to meet.

The surest guarantee of physical endurance . . . found in living simply, sleeping much, breathing deeply of good air all the time, exercising daily in the open air, getting as much sunlight as possible and, above all else, eating sparingly every day. This manner of life will build up a body, vigorous, resistant and enduring.

A member of Congress recently spoke for eight hours, almost without rest or food. Of course, nobody wants to hear anybody talk that long, but the experience shows that one can be so strong physically as to go through a grilling like that without bad effects. The fact is, in this particular case the audience suffered more than the speaker.

It pays to store up reserves of strength. There are times in everybody's history when the capability of a test of endurance may mean the saving of a life.

The reported automobile crash near Cullman in which it was declared a young woman had been killed was not confirmed today by police officials of that city. The assistant police chief declared that he knew nothing of such an accident.

The stories of the two wrecks tallied in that it was declared that the wreck was caused when the automobile ran into a ditch off the side of the Bee Line highway.

The Blue Circle

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Incubated, mentally, by shock, as a result of experiences during the World War, Renshaw makes a proposition to David, Campbell, wealthy, elderly man of leisure, this for a year he assumes responsibility for him (Renshaw)—practically "buy" him. Doctor Stanley, life-long friend of Campbell's, indorses the proposition, which Campbell, with some natural misgivings, accepts. The arrangement is that the young man becomes an inmate of the Campbell household, with the nominal duty of secretary. Renshaw meets Verity, Campbell's granddaughter, and gets the impression that she does not like him. Jenks, the butler, Renshaw also feels, as distinctly hostile.

CHAPTER II.—At dinner, a guest, referred to as Madame Hvoeslef, is not present. Renshaw has a feeling that the servants are spying on him. Jenks warns him that there are "queer things" going on in the house. That night he is disturbed by the appearance on the wall of his room of a small blue circle of light. Mysterious noises in the corridor outside his door cause him to investigate, but he discovers nothing unusual.

CHAPTER III.—Campbell tells Renshaw that the household is in some respects "unusual," but makes light of his story of the mysterious sounds. Renshaw meets Madame Hvoeslef, a foreigner, with an air of mystery.

CHAPTER IV.—Madame Hvoeslef asks Renshaw to go to New York on short journey, on a mission for her next day. During the night the blue circle again appears and the mysterious noises are resumed. Arising to investigate, Renshaw discovers he is locked in. He hears the sound of a heavy body crawling away.

CHAPTER V.—Remembering Jenks' warning, Renshaw tells the butler of the mysterious noises, but gets no satisfaction. Madame Hvoeslef gives him a handbag, declaring its contents are precious, which he is to deliver to Mr. Atkins in New York. After dressing, Renshaw again finds his door locked, but he is promptly opened by Jenks. Renshaw delivers the handbag. Remembering his locked door that morning Renshaw is vaguely uneasy about the handbag, and calls up Atkins. He learns that the handbag delivered contained only blank paper.

CHAPTER VI.—Meeting the ladies at the Waldorf, Renshaw learns that Madame Hvoeslef's property is safe, the bag he delivered being a duplicate, for which no explanation can be made. Hart gets permission to stay in town that night, producing a substitute chauffeur. On the way home Renshaw sends back the substitute, taking the wheel himself.

CHAPTER VII.—Despite her indifference, Renshaw feels himself becoming deeply interested in Verity. During the night he is awakened by the girl, who tells him her grandfather has had an accident and is unconscious. They get the old man to bed. Restored to consciousness he with difficulty conveys to Renshaw a message. Watch! Take charge.

CHAPTER VIII.—Verity is annoyed at her grandfather's plans. Renshaw in charge, but they reach an amicable understanding, Verity being impressed by Renshaw's masterful handling of the situation.

She turned to Morris. "Miss Campbell attends to all," she explained. "Get no one ever sees—how do you put it?—the wheels go round! Back morning she has everything arranged for the day before we lazy ones are out of our beds."

Renshaw glanced at Verity. This was news to him. Even after his talk with Jenks, he had assumed that Miss Campbell's part in the household routine was confined to making out the menus. He wished that she would look after the linen supply a little better. He liked a lot of towels, and since the day of his arrival his towel had not been replaced. Of course, it had been told that he could find fresh linen in that little closet near his room but at the recurrent moments when he missed it he usually was in an extreme state of address and had so in his eyes. It was not convenient in these conditions, to plunge into the outer regions of the hall for fresh linen.

Verity was shaking her head. "I don't do much," she corrected. "Jenks is really quite unusual, a Doctor Morris says. He thinks of everything. I often wonder how we got on before he came."

Morris returned to the topic that next to his excellent luncheon, he liked it.

"Living in a bed of roses, I call it," he sententiously observed. "And it's what's going to save our patient. Absolute peace, rest, relaxation; no worry, no strain—not one man in a million can have all that. Your grandfather has it!—this last to Verity."

"And you're quite sure he will get well?" The girl's low voice was suddenly understated. Looking at her more closely, Renshaw saw that she was showing the effects of her night's vigil. Her clear pallor was intensified, and there were shadows under her eyes.

"I haven't a doubt of it," Morris spoke heartily, but with an attempt, somewhat muffled by broiled sweet breads. "In fact, I feel so comfortable about him that I'm going off for a few hours this afternoon. Mustn't neglect my other patients, you know. But, to be absolutely safe, I'll telephone several times, in case you want to reach me. It's largely a question of nursing now, and entire quiet. That's why we're keeping all you good people out of the sick room."

"You saw my aunt, Mrs. Pardee this morning, didn't you, doctor?" Verity asked.

"Yes; I looked in on my way down to lunch. She's all right—only a slight cold. No temperature, no suggestion of influenza. I've told her to stay in bed today. Fortunately, she's not anxious about Mr. Campbell. She has accepted our prediction that he will soon be around again."

Through the mind of each of his three listeners flowed the same thought. Mrs. Pardee, the one member who had been utterly unconscious of the undercurrents at Tawno Ker was also the one consistent pessimist in that ménage. She had never had cause to worry, and she had never ceased to do so. Now that genuine reason for worry offered itself, she cast it off as unconsciously as a bird sheds a wing-feather.

After luncheon, Morris followed Renshaw into the study to smoke a companionable cigar. He had found an opportunity to carry out his resolution to sound Stanley about this odd young chap, who looked like a pessimistic Greek athlete in modern clothes. The little he had learned had added to his interest. Apparently the secretary had passed through an experience that would have knocked out most men for all time. There seemed little left of its effects except the young man's detached air.

Morris had also been told something about Madame Hvoeslef, and had grasped the interesting fact that a minute representative of European royalty was in the main hall at the moment of Stanley's recital, earnestly engaged in kicking her nurse in the stomach, as that stolid person bore her off for her morning nap. Morris had never before moved in such circles as these. He had a conviction that he never would again. His firm intention was to make the best of his opportunities—first by going his utmost for his patient, for he was a conscientious man, and next by seeing as much of these interesting persons as his duties allowed.

Renshaw found himself unexpectedly liking the country doctor who was so simple, so direct, and so human, and whose enjoyment of the unusual creature comforts that surrounded him was as frank as a schoolboy's might have been. He was almost tempted to speak to Morris about the thing and about the blue circle—almost, but not quite. He had not failed to take in the full significance of the physician's words during luncheon. Campbell needed, above everything else, perfect peace and quiet. To suggest that, after all, this admirably run establishment did not offer these things would seriously upset the physician's serene frame of mind—even if he accepted the statements at their face value, which probably he would not do.

The two men chatted of the patient and of the reports in the morning newspapers, and parted in fifteen minutes, Morris to make an afternoon round of his other patients, and Renshaw to mount to his room. He had some vague notion of asking Jenks to escort him through the house. He would most awfully like to know the entire plan. As he reached the upper hall, he met Verity at the head of the staircase. Her presence there surprised him. The inmates of the left wing generally used a side stairway that led to the rear of the main hall. Probably Miss Campbell had

12 Years Ago From The Daily of May 11, 1913

May 11 falling on Sunday, there was no issue of The Daily of that date.

The Anniston Star suggests that Albany try some good stiff fining along with the places of signs on the highways leading to and from the city. The Star evidently is not aware of the work that the city administration has been carrying on for the past year with reference to the halting of speed demons.

Folks are going to the north pole for romance and danger. Fail to note why that should be so thrilling, just get your best girl and try beating a few fast trains across the track.

Editor Pierce over at Huntsville boasts and boasts of the old home town and it is right that he should, but we suggest he take his foot off the gas on that "Greater Huntsville, the center of the New South" stuff. Huntsville is a good city, the folks make good neighbors, but other Valley folks are just as good and the cities growing as fast.

There has been many a slip between Ardmore and Athens in years past but the state highway department is determined to remove all the black spots in Alabama's roadway system. The contract for the Ardmore-Athens road is being let this week. This will provide only a four-hour journey from Albany-Decatur to Nashville. With the bridge built at Albany-Decatur there will be another half hour cut from the time table.

In keeping with the new road program of the county and the state the Daily suggests that people from over the county write to the local newspaper and tell of the road conditions in their particular section. We believe that it will be worth the time spent to call it to the attention of the commissioners. In this day and time there is not a section that does not feel the need of good roads if they have been denied them. Let us get the entire county out of the mud in winter, summer, spring, and fall. Let the world know that if there is a progressive citizenship in the nation that it is lodged in Morgan county.

"WORLD GOODWILL DAY" TO BE OBSERVED ON MAY 18

Children throughout the world are being urged by the World Conference of Educators to observe on May 18 the twenty-sixth anniversary of the opening of the first Hague Conference on World Peace as "World Goodwill Day."

A call for the Sunday school children of America to join in the movement on Sunday, May 17, has been issued by Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, secretary of the Commission on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches. Another society, the American School Citizenship League, is urging the observance of the day in the public schools on May 18. The statement of the Commission on International Justice and Goodwill says:

"May 18 was the day on which the first Hague Conference on World Peace in 1899 was convened and for several years before the War it was observed as 'Hague Day' or 'Peace Day.' The first World Conference of Educators after the War, held in San Francisco, suggested that this day might be revived and re-christened with a new name, 'World Goodwill Day.' Its observance is now being energetically pushed in many lands.

"Observance of this day in the public schools of the United States is being urged by the American School Citizenship League. Exercises are recommended in which information shall be imparted to the children and youth regarding present-day movements to abolish war by establishing better ways for settling international disputes. The ways in which nations are learning to work together in setting up international laws, in maintaining the World Court of Justice and the League of Nations, and in solving their difficult problems can and should be told to every member of the rising generation.

"Boys and girls in the early teens—and even younger—can easily understand these matters if clearly explained. In many schools these exercises include short speeches, the reading of prize essays, the singing of songs, both national and international, and also plays and pageants which carry out the spirit of the day."

ROLLING STONE THEORY AGAIN IS SHOWN TO CITIZENSHIP OF THE NATION

Somewhere, sometime, somehow, you have heard the ancient story of the rolling stone that gathers no moss, surely you have thought of the saying and found that a rolling stone never rolls upward, it cannot roll but in one direction and that is downward. Once the stone starts rolling it is very difficult to stop.

The United States Commerce board, insurance department, sees a very interesting point in this particular. They find that department stores over the country are attempting to halt the whirling stone in its downward flight. The following announcement is made:

The "floater" is one of those human beings who defy economic classification. He is neither fish, flesh, nor fowl from the viewpoint of the business statistician, but comes and goes as he listeth obeying no impulse but his own. He cannot be fitted into any plan.

One aspect of the problem he presents appears as labor turnover. Another is brought to light in a survey of the plans followed by fifty-one large department stores scattered over the country for indemnifying employees disabled through injury or disease. This survey was made by the Insurance Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Various plans are followed in indemnifying employees which is accomplished through insurance companies, mutual aid associations, or by the employers themselves. But in none of them does the "floater" figure. Virtually all of the types of plans eliminate him by establishing a probationary period of from one month to a year of employment before the indemnification plan comes into effect.

Transient population, viewed from the standpoint of cities, is never of any benefit. The man who comes into the city for a month or six months and takes leave before he has had time to become interested in the problems of that locality, is of no benefit at all to the city.

Substantial citizenship is often tempted to leave the locality that has been the home of their fathers, with stories of the amassing of great wealth, splendid living conditions, localities where everyone rides in a big car, smokes fat cigars and has a town and country house. It is always well to discount these stories to a certain extent for while there may be a great deal of prosperity for some people, there is little prosperity for the majority. The mantle of the rich can be worn by only a few, it has never been large enough to go round.

The story of the man who went to look for buried treasure and after hunting for many years returned to his former home only to find that the treasure lay beneath the cobblestones in his own dooryard, may be a sentimental myth to some people, but to the majority of American home owners it is true in every word. Treasure in life comes in recognition, money and fame and it is more likely to be found where the folks know you through your years of toil for achievement than in the locality where you stop for an interval of six months or a year and then remove again to find the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow trail.

ATTACK ON RUM ROW IS SIGNIFICANT

The attack that has been launched just off the Atlantic coast against the rum runners from every nation in the world is significant in the news of the days and in the lives of the people of today.

The battle that is raging between the dry forces of this nation and the adherents of the late John Barleycorn marks a return of American determination that cannot be doubted by any country on earth. Rum Row is breaking up, disintegrating and soon that formidable armada will be no more. Liquor may be smuggled into this country in a small way, but we do not believe that foreign liquor dealers will again place their money into something to which they know the nation of Americans oppose. European countries should particularly take heed of the opposition that the rum fleet has met with. Europe knows the strength of the American nation, Europe is aware that Americans can break up or put over most anything that they set their hands and heads to.

America has set her head and her hands to work against the forces of whiskey and the year is not far away when smuggling of contraband beverage into this country will be a thing of the past. We will not even be bothered by our own countrymen who have persisted in making the "wild cat" stuff for years.

It seems that European nations would be respecters of American law. They should realize that America does not want whiskey, that they have passed the eighteenth amendment for the purpose of getting rid of booze and that they expect other nations to respect the law.

The dry forces of America are in the saddle and for the good of the nation. They have met with every sort of opposition since the enactment of the Volstead measure but they have fought bravely on in the belief that they are right and the return of whiskey to this country will mean only greater lawlessness, unemployment, starvation, desolate homes, increased illiteracy and the growth of the brute instinct that is in human kind. Even at this time the Rum Row outfit is threatening the lives of the forces that are attacking the liquor armada. They will kill to get their goods into this country. There is a bit of advice that would be a great aid to them and that is that the dry forces have gone into the fight fully prepared and knowing well just what calibre people that they were forced to deal with. The dry fleet at this time is probably ten times as heavily armed as the liquor squadron and it is practically an assured fact that in case battle is necessary that the dry forces will not be found running away. They will fight until the last ship is sent to the bottom of the sea for they believe that they are right, they have American law behind them and they have an American government to back them if it is found to be necessary.

We differ with the method of attack that the dry navy is making at this time. We believe that the best result can be obtained by going into the fight as any battle fleet would go into a fight. The rum smugglers are violating American mandates, they are worse than criminals, they are enemies of mankind, then why not give them a dose of their own medicine?

The Tuscaloosa News looks at the matter from a more mild standpoint but the closing line of the News' editorial shows the feeling that is against John Barleycorn:

"A new war is approaching. It is a naval war, and it is scheduled to open up a major offensive about July 1.

It will be a war of the Coast Guard against Commodore Barleycorn and his merry fleet of rum ships. The last of the government's made-over vessels will go into service, to swell the already large force battling for a dry coast line. There will be 310 craft in all, manned by nearly 4,000 trained men. Most of them, from destroyers down to modest-looking power boats, mount guns, and the crews are well armed.

"There will be exciting incidents galore along several thousand miles of coast, east, west, north and south, but especially in the vicinity of a celebrated and very wet thoroughfare called Rum Row, off the Jersey coast within striking distance of New York.

"There is power enough in that new prohibition navy to blow all Rum Row out of the water and make the whales and mermaids taste alcohol for years. But there will be no assault without overt acts.

"It would be peculiarly appropriate if there were a big battle on July 4."

The News believes that a naval battle would be peculiarly appropriate on July 4 but we differ in that we believe that it should come at once. Blow Rum Row out of the water for good. If nations will not respect American law and American belief then teach them in a language that they do understand, the language that they have understood since July 4, 1776.

VAST ARMY OF BOYS

HEADED FOR CAMPS UNDER Y. M. C. A. CARE

NEW YORK—This is the season when the snap of rod and line, the whisper of wind through the forests a siren song to boys, old and young. To satisfy the thirst of youth for the out-of-doors, the Young Men's Christian Association is already making preparations for its hundreds of summer camps, the attendance of which is expected to exceed that for any previous year since the first camp in 1885.

Arthur N. Cotton, head of the Boys' Work of the National Council, estimates that the enrollment this year probably will reach 100,000 for the 600 Y. M. C. A. camps which will be held from June to September throughout the United States for boys from 12 to 18 years of age.

This is only one phase of the summer's program. Thousands of other boys who are unable to attend camp will be given opportunities for free swimming and gymnasium training, hikes, educational trips to factories, nature study, Bible study, and abbreviated scholastic courses in Y. M. C. A.'s from coast to coast.

"Y. M. C. A. camps," said Mr Cotton, "furnish an outlet for boy energy and provide a pathway toward the development of clean, wholesome living. There boyish impulses are directed

ADVICE TO GIRLS

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am cursed with bright red hair. When I go down the street people say "Hello, Red." I cannot keep my dignity, and all because of the flaming hair of mine. Please tell me what I can do.
REED.
DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
Grim and bear it, my dear! Remember that red hair is an asset and not a liability. It is much rarer than any other shade of hair and should not prove detrimental in your social life. If you pretend that you are not ofended when people you meet call you nicknames, they will soon tire of the silly game and give it up altogether. If you show them that you are indifferent to these nicknames, they will get no pleasure out of concocting new ones. Try this and see if it doesn't work!
DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am very much in love with a young man I recently met. One evening when he was at my home, at a party, he was very attentive to me. He plays the piano exceptionally well and I told him to come over some night and he could play, but since that time I have seen very little of him. Would it appear bold if I should write on Tuesday who continues very low.
Miss Lena Self is expected home Saturday from Birmingham where she was recently operated on.
DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
ask him over some evening when I see him again?
MIMIE.
DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl in my teens, and am in love with a young man. He does not live in this town. He wrote me for some time and then stopped writing.
Shall I write to him?
W. W. R.
W. W. R.: If this young man has not answered your letters, my dear, you must try to forget him. Take his neglect as a sign that he is no longer interested in you and cultivate the friendship of people who appreciate you.
Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

First Casualty in Rum War

The first capture in the new war on Rum Row, conducted by the greatest Coast Guard fleet ever assembled, was this boat, called the 'fastest rum-runner.' She was taken ashore at Parkertown, N. J., and beached by Coast Guards, after a number of cases of liquor were unloaded. Shortly afterwards, a man, who said he was a part owner, strolled up, suddenly opened the gasoline cocks, and threw in his cigar butt, with the resulting explosion snapped in the unusual photo above. He escaped after saying he would rather destroy the $35,000 boat than have it used in the anti-rum patrol.

WOMEN'S CLUBS COME OUT AGAINST WOMAN GOVERNOR

BALTIMORE—A proposal to nominate a woman for governor of Maryland is meeting with strong opposition from women.

An effort at a recent convention of the United Democratic Women's clubs of the state at Salisbury to obtain the endorsement of Mrs. W. W. Hubbard, of Chestertown, for the gubernatorial honor, failed and subsequently the Baltimore Federation of democratic women put its official stamp of disapproval on the nomination of women candidates for the office.

The federation resolved "that there be recorded as the unanimous sense of the Federation of Democratic Women Incorporated of Baltimore in view of the recent public reports with respect to the nomination of a woman for governor of Maryland the federation's emphatic opposition to the ill-considered and hasty thought giving rise to this ambition proposal."

There will be no election for governor in Maryland until November, 1926.

Liquor Proof of Legality of Search

(Associated Press)
RICHMOND, Va., May 11.—Liquor found in an automobile is, in itself, proof that search of the car without a warrant is a "reasonable act," the United States circuit court of appeals here ruled today.

This opinion sustained the conviction of Louis Ungerleiber and Albert Dupke, who drew sentences in the district court at Wheeling, West Va., for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

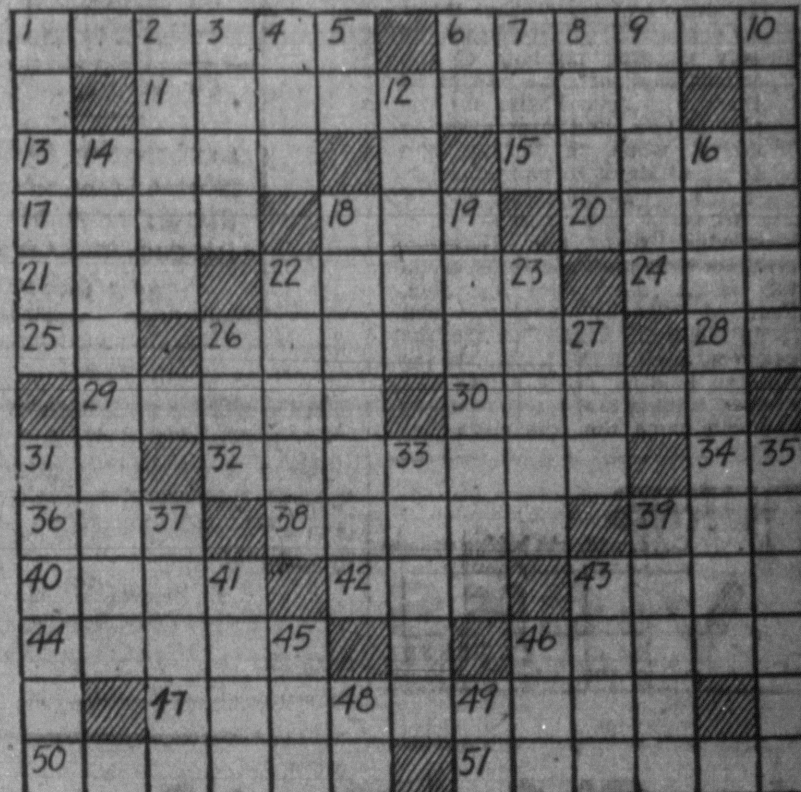

Provision of Alien Land Law Upheld

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 11.—The provision of the alien land law in California, imposing upon aliens ineligible to citizenship the burden of proving their purchase of agricultural lands was not for the purpose of defeating that statute, was sustained today by the supreme court in an appeal brought by W. A WORD FOR BEGINNERS.

The best way to solve a cross-word puzzle is to run quickly over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms and compare them to the spaces in the puzzle extending cross-wise or downward from the number of the synonym. Some word which will just fit in the number of space available will quickly occur to you in some instances, giving you a foundation from which to solve the more difficult words. The words must interlock perfectly.

Case of Dr. Fosdick

AGAIN TO BE ARGUED BY PRESBYTERIANS

COLUMBUS, O.—The case of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Baptist minister, who recently vacated the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church of New York City at the request of the Presbyterian General Assembly, again will be the center of controversy when the assembly convenes for its 137th annual session here the week beginning May 21.

The Fosdick dispute arose at last year's session over the question of his orthodoxy. His opponents succeeded in getting the assembly to vote for the termination of his relationship with the Presbyterian church. Immediate action, however, was not taken by the New York presbytery and it was this delay that is expected to bring comment by a faction of the assembly headed by Dr. Walter D. Buchanan, pastor of Broadway Presbyterian church, New York.

Dr. Buchanan and his associates also will bring other cases against the New York presbytery, it is announced here, charging that it has licensed young ministers to preach who do not believe in the Virgin Birth, the miracles of Christ, and other fundamentals of the New Testament. These cases will be tried in executive session by the judicial commission, a separate body which sits apart from the general assembly. If the assembly does not accept the findings of the commission, then the case at issue will be tried before the assembly.

The first test of the strength of the fundamentalists and the liberals will come on the election of a moderator at the opening session. The fundamentalists won last year, electing moderator Dr. Clarence Edward McCartney, pastor of Arch Street Presbyterian church, Philadelphia. Dr. McCartney was credited with being mainly responsible for the bringing to head of the charges against the New York presbytery centering around Dr. Fosdick.

The fundamentalists this year expected to support Dr. Lapsley McAfee of Berkeley, Cal. William Jennings Bryan, representing Florida presbytery, could have nomination for moderator on behalf of the fundamentalists, but refuses stand for the office representing divided church, according to the view here. Another likely candidate, moderator is Dr. William O. Thomsen of Columbus, president of Ohio State University. He has been for years in this office.

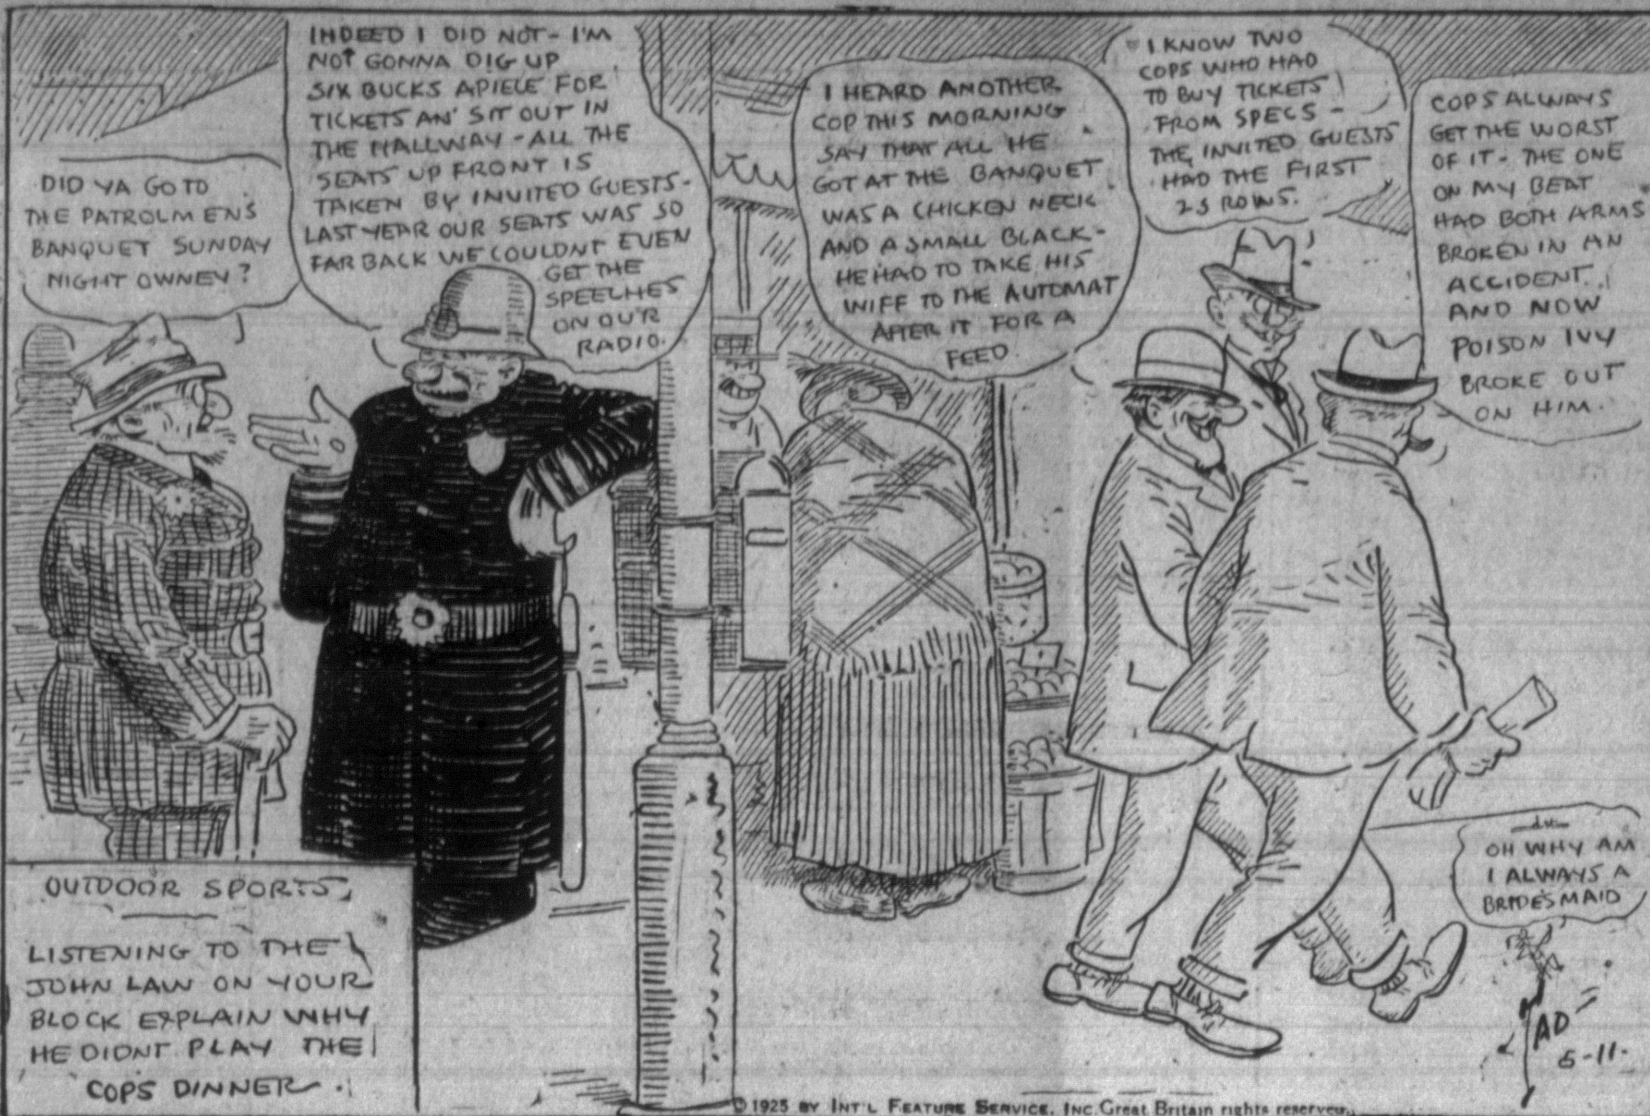

The Presbyterian General Assembly will be officially attended by 1, newly elected commissioners from 299 presbyteries throughout United States and by board secretaries and other officials totaling nearly 2,000.

Annual reports will be submitted by all the boards and agencies, special committee headed by Dr. Joseph A. Vance of Detroit, Mich., present a report for a plan systemizing the finances of the denomination into one unified method in the interests of economy and efficiency.

"Chair-Widow"

The woman pictured above threw a new and confusing aspect into the already puzzling mystery of the electrocutions of the Diamond brothers with John Farina for the murder of two bank messengers in Brooklyn, when, in Buffalo, she made an affidavit to police declaring that she was the secret wife of Joe Diamond and that she had knowledge that the Diamond brothers were innocent of the crime for which they were executed. Fear of "Cheeks" Luciano, who made the weird confession that he perjured against the Diamonds for revenge, kept her silent before, she averred, adding that Luciano knows and can name the true murderer.

Ralston Team Loses to Alabama Power;
L. & N. Plays Decatur On Next Tuesday

The Ralston Independent team of the Louisville and Nashville shops proved an easy victim to the Alabama Power company Saturday afternoon at Malone Park and lost a 12-4 verdict. Gallagher, hurling for the Power company was in fine form and kept the Ralstonites busy stirring the atmosphere through the afternoon.

Birdsong was the hurling choice of the losing combination and although he was hit freely through the entire game he hung up a nice string of strikeouts. Birdsong had fifteen strikeouts to his credit, fanning Gallagher and Shelton four times each.

The Power company started hostilities in the first inning and counted enough markers for the entire game. The Power company gathered five in the first inning as the result of a trio of base clouds and some loose playing by the Ralston entry.

Gallagher did not allow any scoring until the third when the Ralston team scored a single run. They counted again in the sixth, one in the seventh and with the bases choked in the ninth were able to push across but a single counter.

The score by innings:
Alabama Power Co., 500 114 01x—12
Ralston Indt., 001 001 101—4

Tuesday afternoon the Louisville and Nashville plays the Decatur team at 4:15 at Malone park. Entering the second week of the city league series these teams will endeavor to get into the win column neither of them having won their initial engagements last week.

Thursday afternoon the Alabama Power company and the Consolidated Sunday school team meet at the park to end the first dispute of the year for the league leadership.

A meeting has been called tonight of the baseball committee to meet at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:15 o'clock. Plans will be discussed for the naming of an all star team to meet outside clubs during the present season. DR. BRANDES DECLARES
CULTURE A THING OF PAST

BERLIN—George Brandes, the Danish critic, recently lectured in Berlin on "Europe as it is today." Despite his 84 years the speaker's mental keenness and elocution are surprising. Brandes is not infatuated with the Europe of today. Culture, he believes, is a thing of the past. In 1913, he said, the fires of the impending world conflagration were glimmering everywhere in Europe and quite as much in Paris as elsewhere. When he made this declaration there was a dead silence in the crowded hall. He continued to speak of the pernicious influence of the press everywhere in Europe.

still play a part in the concert of the nations? If so, scarcely more than the treble. And the League of Nations? With a disparaging gesture he declared that institution a farce.
